

TCU DAILY SKIFF

DAILYSKIFF.COM · THURSDAY, OCTOBER 29, 2009 · VOL. 107 ISSUE 35

How do the Frogs match up against UNLV?

Sports, page 8

SPORTS

Two sports editors debate who will win this Saturday's TCU vs. UNLV football game. Friday

NEWS

An assistant director from "The Office" will be visiting the film, television and digital media department. Friday

CAMPUS RECREATION

RUFFLED FEATHERS

Freshman psychology and child development major Kristen Upton and junior psychology major Lindsay Randall fight it out with pillows in the Intramural Pillow Fight Tournament. Randall would go on to win the match and the tournament for the women's division.

36 compete in Campus pillow fight

By Allison Erickson
Staff Reporter

Lindsay Randall and Preston Thompson won two Dallas Cowboys tickets apiece in the university's first intramural pillow fight Wednesday evening in the Campus Commons.

Straddled across a padded wooden beam over an inflated, red and blue apparatus, participants swung pillows at each other while trying to maintain their balance.

Four participants signed up for women's division and automatically qualified for the semifinals. Alyson Morales, a freshman journalism major, defeated Alison Deathe, a freshman fashion merchandising major, in the early match. Randall, a junior psychology major and Campus Recreation employee, defeated Kristen Upton, a freshman psychology and child development major. Randall won the final in the best of three match when Morales, in yellow, lost her balance twice and rolled over the beam.

The men's division saw a larger turnout, with 32 contestants. Only 16 made the initial tournament list, while the other 16 were waitlisted. The final four in the men's division included Preston Thompson, Jeremy Burkett, Will Gaffney and Ben Halliday. Thompson, a freshman pre-business major, battled Ben Halliday, also a business major, in a vigorous display of aggression, strength and agility for the final match. Halliday swung hard, and delivered fast hits directly

SEE PILLOW FIGHT · PAGE 2

HOMECOMING

Adopted frog latest university addition

By Katie Love
Staff Reporter

A frog-filled Friday awaits students, faculty and anyone else interested in taking part in Homecoming activities on campus this weekend.

One of the newest additions to the festivities, Frog Fest, will take place at 8:00 p.m. on Friday immediately following the Homecoming Parade which is scheduled to begin at 5:45 p.m.

Kendal Rader, a junior speech pathology major and Programming Council Homecoming director, said activities during Frog Fest will include a hot air balloon, a bounce house, a live band called Professor D, fried Oreos, Snickers, cheesecake from the company Fried What? and pumpkin patches. The first 1,000 children who enter Frog Fest with a costume on will receive a free football ticket for the TCU vs. UNLV game Saturday, she said.

The university also adopted a real Horned Frog, also known as the Texas Horned Lizard, from the Fort Worth Zoo, Rader said.

"I wanted to work with the zoo because they are our neighbors and part of my goal for Homecoming was to build a strong relationship with the community," Rader said.

Originally, the goal was to have the Horned Frog live on campus, but they need special care. They eat 80 to 100 harvest ants a day, Rader said. The Texas Horned Lizard is also listed by the state of Texas as Protected since their population has declined. Owners of the creatures also need a special permit.

Chancellor Victor Boschini described the Fort Worth Zoo as a treasure to the community and said making sure the Fort Worth Zoo prospers would be in the community's best interest.

"I think anything we can do to support our great zoo helps support TCU and Fort Worth at the same time," Boschini said. "I also think this would be a neat tie-in for Homecoming."

Merrill Pittman, a senior political science major and speaker for the House of Student Representatives, said the university is always looking for new traditions. Pittman said she thinks it is important for people unfamiliar with Fort Worth to see how the campus takes tradition seriously and embraces the mascot.

Rader said adopting the horned

SEE HORNED FROG · PAGE 2

HARDCOVER FICTION BEST SELLERS

- 1 The Lost Symbol by Dan Brown
 - 2 Pursuit of Honor by Vince Flynn
 - 3 Nine Dragons by Michael Connelly
 - 4 The Help by Kathryn Sockett
 - 5 The Last Song by Nicholas Sparks
 - 6 A Touch of Dead by Charla Harris
 - 7 Half Broke Horses by Jeannette Walls
 - 8 Rough Country by John Sandford
 - 9 An Echo in the Bone by Diana Gabaldon
 - 10 The Professional by Robert. B. Parker
- The New York Times

Violence against Sikh-Americans reveals the darker side of America.

Opinion, page 3

CORRECTION

In Wednesday's edition of the Skiff, due to a reporting error, candidates running for Student Government Association treasurer were mistakenly listed as running for Programming Council chair and vice versa.

PECULIAR FACT

TEL AVIV, Israel - Coffee drinkers at a popular Israeli chain can have their fortunes told for free if they buy a cup of the brew that leaves grounds at the bottom.

— Reuters

TODAY'S WEATHER

69 48
HIGH LOW

T-storms

Tomorrow: Afternoon Showers
53 / 42

Saturday: Sunny
65 / 46

Please remember to recycle this newspaper.

ATHLETICS

Texas-themed group supports Frogs

By Katie Love
Staff Reporter

When it comes to Horned Frog spirit, seniors Kelly Barnes and Nile Elam travel the distance to show their purple pride. Although both seniors have internships in Washington this semester, Barnes, a political science major and Elam, a history major, fly to all of the university's home football games to cheer the Frogs on as members of the TCU Rangers, a new student organization on campus.

"We have a phenomenal football team and some people have really underestimated how much work has gone into this football team and I think the least we can do is honor them with this group," Elam said. "I would like this team to get a dedicated group of fans that they deserve."

The TCU Rangers just before kickoff before this month's home game against Colorado State.

Barnes said TCU Rangers developed during a new student participation committee called Back the Frogs in May 2009. The Back the Frogs committee focused on ways to increase student participation.

"Students at TCU can be pretty apathetic sometimes about football

SEE RANGERS · PAGE 2

HOUSING

Residential Services undergoes name change

By Xan Angelovich
Staff Reporter

Residential Services is no more – by name anyway.

Heather Miller, associate director of Residential Services, said the department has changed its name to Housing and Residence Life in order to make it easier for students to understand the purpose of the office.

"People always called us housing anyway," Miller said. "We felt it was a little more representative of what we actually did."

Housing and Residence Life opened their doors at a celebration last Wednesday allowing students to meet staff members and learn about new developments within the department, Miller said.

"It makes people more comfortable to ask you questions later and putting faces with names," Miller said.

"Residential Services didn't always resonate with them. A lot of times they just didn't realize that Residential Services was who would help them with their meal plan, or their room assignment."

Craig Allen
director of Housing and Residence Life

Craig Allen, director of Housing and Residence Life, said he felt better name recognition was an important step toward decreasing the number of students who were confused about which office to call when they had housing questions.

"Residential Services didn't always resonate with them," Allen said. "A lot of times they just didn't realize that Residential Services was who would help them with their meal plan, or their room assignment."

Holding the celebration at the department's offices was also important because it familiarized students with the location of Housing and Residence Life, in the basement of Samuelson Hall, Allen said.

Although students were aware of the services provided by their resident assistant and hall director, students have not been aware of all of the services Housing and Residence Life provided and they needed to know where to come for those services, Allen said.

The event also provided students a sneak peek of the newly renovated Milton Daniel Hall. Allen showed the students blueprints and sketches of what the dorm would look like when renovations were completed.

The sketches included an amphitheater outside Milton Daniel, the return of the sand volleyball courts and a "Harry Potter-style great hall," Allen said.

Madi Reid, a freshman communication studies major who was at the event, said she was especially interested to see the preview of Milton Daniel.

"I live in Moncreif right now and I was excited about seeing what all the construction would end up looking like," Reid said.

Although the name has changed, Allen said, Housing and Residence Life has not changed its goal of providing excellent housing facilities and programs for students.

"We're more than just the building," he said.

NEWS

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE

Palin's pipeline plan scrutinized

By Dan Joling
Associated Press Writing

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Sarah Palin hit the vice presidential campaign trail last year and touted what Alaska could provide for the rest of America — a natural gas pipeline to help lead the country to energy independence.

When a pipeline might be built remains a giant question for Alaskans who need the project to support a vulnerable economy and for the Lower 48 states that need the gas, and a petroleum economist who spent more than 25

"To have 60 of us (legislators) trying to negotiate a project of this magnitude — we bring integrity to the transaction but we don't bring the sophistication of a Fortune 500 business board of director."

Jay Ramras
State Rep., R-Fairbanks

years in the Alaska Department of Revenue says it may never happen under Palin's plan.

The former governor's proposal used faulty accounting to reach the flawed conclusion that a pipeline owned by a third-party would be more profitable than one owned by major gas producers, who must be on board for any project to be successful, wrote Roger Marks, in his paper, "Why America May Not See Alaska Natural Gas Soon," published last month in the Journal of Economic Issues.

Alaska Governor Sarah Palin, center, addresses members of the media and legislators during a news conference on August 1, 2008 following the Senate's approval of the TransCanada proposal under the Alaska Gasline Inducement Act to build a gas pipeline, in Juneau, Alaska.

Palin's alternative, Marks said, discourages their participation and may even stand in the way of a more financially viable project.

"The prospects for success in getting a pipeline constructed appear doubtful," he wrote.

Palin's replacement, Gov. Sean Parnell, remains committed to her plan however. Marks' former boss, Revenue

Commissioner Pat Galvin, says Marks' perspective was thoroughly analyzed and "found to be without merit."

The issue is confusing to the public and even to state legislators who immersed themselves in pipeline details when they passed Palin's plan in 2007. State Rep. Jay Ramras, R-Fairbanks, who has become a critic, said lawmakers "wandered into tall grass without a very good GPS system."

"To have 60 of us (legislators) trying to negotiate a project of this magnitude — we bring integrity to the transaction but we don't bring the sophistication of a Fortune 500 business board of directors," said Ramras, a hotel and restaurant owner. "We lack that. I'm a pretty smart business guy and I lack that."

There's more at stake than Palin's legacy. About 90 percent of Alaska's general fund revenue budget is fueled by the petroleum industry. High prices have kept coffers filled, but Alaska's golden goose, the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, now operates at less than half its capacity as North Slope production winds down.

Natural gas was found at the same time as oil at Prudhoe Bay in 1967. Proved reserves are 35 trillion cubic feet.

PILLOW FIGHT

continued from page 1

at a comparatively smaller Thompson, some landing on his face. Thompson maintained his balance while fighting back with hard hits of his own.

"It's all about balance," Thompson said. "Look at me, I had to win."

The blue and red inflatable apparatus came from Texas Sumo, the company Campus Recreation hired for the event. The "Pillow Bash," as Texas Sumo employee Patrick McHenry called the red and blue apparatus, had a bar in the middle for contestants to balance on while dueling each other. The rules, explained by Mike Hackemack, assistant director of Campus Recreation, forbade the pillow fighters to grab each other's pillows, touch the middle or bottom of the Pillow Bash for support, or interlock their feet to prevent them from falling.

HORNED FROG

continued from page 1

frog will cost the university an annual fee of $1,000.

A table with information about the adoption will be set up at Frog Fest and donations can be made to help support the horned frog. Discounted Fort Worth Zoo tickets will also be available to buy.

"I think anything we can do to support our great zoo helps support TCU and Fort Worth at the same time."

Victor Boschini
chancellor

RANGERS

continued from page 1

and sports in general," Barnes said. "We wanted to create a new tradition where we could get students involved and get excitement going about football games."

Carter English, senior marketing major and president of the TCU Rangers, said the Rangers march behind the band into the stadium an hour before the game, defend the Frog Horn and raise the goal net behind the goal post. Six different members are chosen to work home football games, which allows all members to get a chance to stand on the field.

The Rangers' western outfits promote the university as the only Texas school in the Mountain West Conference, English said. Rangers wear western attire, including cowboy hats and white or purple button down shirts.

Along with wearing uniforms, Rangers must have junior or senior standing and have a 2.75 GPA, English said. Since the organization was formed during the summer, a private recruitment took place and members were selected based on their involvement on campus and leadership ability.

John Festervand, assistant director of marketing for the university's athletic program and adviser to the TCU Rangers, said recruitment is open to all students regardless of race or gender.

Formal recruitment will begin this spring and announce-

TCU Alumni Gear

BARNES & NOBLE
BOOKSELLERS

Available at your TCU Bookstore
At the corner of University & Berry

tcu.bkstore.com

Indulge

in Marquis Living

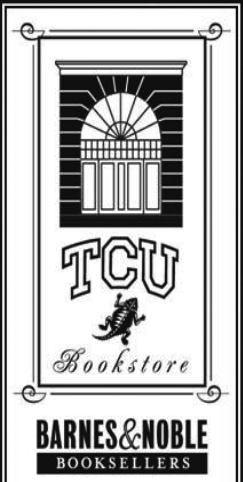

We Welcome TCU Students

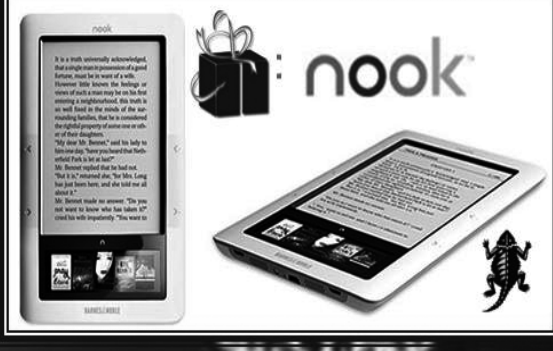

1, 2 & 3 bedroom floor plans available
Come by our office for a quote

Marquis at Stonegate
4200 Bridgeview
Fort Worth, TX 76109
(817) 922- 5200

Just in time for Christmas!

nook

Barnes & Noble's New 3G eReader

nook

is making quite a jingle this season.

It's the only e-reader with two color touchscreens and wireless service included.

Feeling generous? Lend eBooks to a friend

Add bookmarks and notes and highlight passages.

Look up words midsentence on nook's E Ink® display.

Let us help YOU be the first to own one!

...available for pre-order especially at your TCU Bookstore.

(stock is limited—order now before they run out!)

Ask your cashier for details!

OPINION

DAILY SKIFF Editorial Board

David Hall, Editor-in-Chief
 Rose Baca, Web Editor
 Michael Carroll, News Editor
 Travis Brown, Sports Editor
 Katie Ruppel, Features Editor

Julieta Chiquillo, Managing Editor
 Logan Wilson, Associate Editor
 Maricruz Salinas, News Editor
 Chance Welch, Multimedia Editor
 Libby Davis, Opinion Editor

The Skiff View

Spirit group just what Frog football needs

Their uniforms speak for themselves. A buttoned down shirt, leather vest, jeans, cowboy boots and a handkerchief tied loosely around the neck. No, they're not the Texas Rangers, but the TCU Rangers, and they're out defending the Horned Frogs at every home football game. The newly-created organization was formed in order to increase the weak student participation that often exists at the games. And by their consistent home game attendance, the TCU Rangers are giving the team the representation they are rightly owed.

The university is lucky to have such a great football program and a talented team to boot. The same team that gives as much school spirit in every play as they sometimes receive. So at a time when the team truly deserves our support it sure is nice to see a group of students doing just that.

One of the best things about the TCU Rangers is that almost anyone can join their force. To be a member, a student must be of junior or senior standing regardless of gender and have at least a 2.75 GPA. So if you can fulfill those requirements, have school spirit and don't mind yeehawing the football team to victory, get those spurs on and make your way out onto the field.

Web Editor Rose Baca for the editorial board.

The Skiff View represents the collective opinion of the editorial board.

Attacks on Sikhs show lack of American trust

WYATT KANYER

The Sept. 11 attacks changed the United States in a series of cultural, social and political ways. While the war on terror rages on, to the chagrin of some and the disdain of others, possibly the most serious battle taking place is on U.S. soil. This war isn't fought with bombs and firearms, though.

Although the attacks took place over eight years ago, the hate crimes against Muslims, Arabs and Sikhs continue. Of these three groups, however, the Sikhs seem to receive the brunt of attacks based on appearance alone. In fact, the year after the attacks, the number of Sikhs who were victimized was seventeen times higher, according to civilrights.org. According to the report, five percent of all hate crimes committed in the U.S. that year were directed toward Sikhs, and 481 Sikhs were victims of hate crimes.

According to the New York Daily News, the New York Supreme Court convicted a 19-year-old man from Queens to 180 hours of community service after he forced a Sikh man into a bathroom and shaved his head. For Sikhs, long hair is a religious custom, and cutting one's hair is a violation of tradition.

Sikhism is a peaceful religion. There are short spurts of violence in its background, which happened as Sikhs fought for independence in India during the late 1980s and early 1990s.

I was not aware of the extent of Sikh hate crimes until a serious one took place two hours from my hometown in Seattle. According to the Seattle Times, a drunken passenger brutally attacked his cab driver, who was a Sikh man wearing a turban.

The attack was not only shocking in that it happened without a legitimate reason (the drunk man had not been threatened in any way), but also because it happened in Seattle, which is culturally diverse and accepting of most people.

Attacks like the two mentioned here are not freak incidents. They have been taking place on a regular basis in the U.S. since the 9/11 attacks, even though the planes hit the World Trade Center almost a decade ago.

The lack of cultural understanding nationwide has been a significant contributor to the crimes. Sikhs are often mistaken for Muslims, and people in the U.S. often associate Muslims with Osama bin Laden and Al-Qaida. Like Muslims, Sikhs wear turbans, have beards and long hair and are characterized by their dark complexions. And yes, there are Sikhs in some Muslim areas of the world.

But when the two religions are compared, it is immediately clear that the confusion between the two is irrational. For instance, Sikhs do not practice pilgrimages, while pilgrimages are almost essential for Muslims. Also, Sikhs do not proselytize, or make attempts to convert people who are not Sikhs, and Muslims do.

I'm not making an attempt to elevate Sikhs over Muslims or vice versa. Rather, I'm comparing the two in an attempt to reiterate the gravity of U.S. cultural insensitivity. Hateful people are confusing two cultures whose similarities are limited to their devotees' physical appearance. Yet, for some reason, many would say the United States' racist days are behind it.

The U.S. still has a racist society. The more races, cultures and people groups that fall victim to stereotypical discrimination, the more racist the nation will become. Once again, the xenophobic attitude that has pervaded many minds in this country has manifested itself in ignorance and insensitivity.

September 11 was a dark day for the U.S. Before the nation claims it has healed from the devastation, however, it must keep in mind the cultural effects that day has had over the past eight years. The cities and people involved in the attack may have healed, but beliefs-based battles like those declared against Sikh Americans demonstrate just how little the country has recovered.

Wyatt Kanyer is a sophomore news-editorial journalism major from Yakima, Wash.

Alissa Garrett is a graduate mathematics student from Fort Worth.

U.S. soccer teams need work

ANDREA BOLT

When Jonathan Bornstein scored the most amazing header of his life in the fifth minute of stoppage time during the USA/Costa Rica game Oct. 14, I jumped, screamed, yelled and celebrated idiotically, like I'm sure every other U.S. soccer fan did at that moment. The goal led to the U.S. tying Costa Rica 2-2 and was a huge boost for the U.S. after being down nearly the whole game. Moments like these give me hope. They make me want to believe in the U.S. soccer program and have faith that we might actually be able to compete on a world stage next summer with the best teams in the world. They have these shining moments of glory and skill, but then my mind flashes back to the grisly, inexcusable disaster that was the Mexico/USA Gold Cup final and the USA's more recent loss to Mexico in August.

The fact is that the U.S. soccer program has come a long way since its inception. We have world-class players like Tim Howard, the ubiquitous Landon Donovan, Frankie Hejduk and the young, yet dangerous, Jozy Altidore. They have made appearances in the last five World Cups, won CONCACAF numerous times, yet they are still lacking in a multitude of areas.

The most obvious issue concerning the U.S. soccer team is the individualism. It is the first lesson we're taught when we join little league or FFPS (Fun-Fair-Positive-Soccer) as kids. You have to play as a team.

The U.S. consistently has issues with pulling it together as a team and working toward a win. In the horrific loss to Mexico last summer, they played as 11 individual guys on a field, not a well-oiled unit. Some players, like Brian Ching, will never offer anything as team players, yet still see playing time because of individual talent and popularity.

They'll embarrass themselves in a loss against Mexico and then they'll rock the world as they triumph over Spain, the number one team on the planet.

Another critical concern with the U.S. is its blatant inconsistency. Oftentimes, it is a total crapshoot with U.S. team. They'll embarrass themselves in a loss against Mexico and then rock the world as they triumph over Spain, the number one team on the planet. Their playing style changes like David Beckham's hair.

Many critics argue that the U.S. simply lacks the mental composure to compete on a world stage due to its relative youth. If the U.S. isn't mentally prepared to play the best in the world, a perfect example would be the loss to Brazil in the recent Confederations Cup. The U.S. blew a comfortable 2-0 lead and crumbled in the second half to end up losing 3-2.

What teams like Brazil and Spain are known for creativity, which the U.S. hugely lacks. Landon Donovan will make some great runs and have the occasional flash of brilliance but the U.S. needs more than that. They have size, speed and heart, but they need to think on their feet. Being more creative with passes, runs and shots will not only up the level of their competition, but will also gain them some much-needed worldwide respect.

If they want to legitimately pose a threat to the best in the not-so-far-off World Cup, then they're going to have to step up and make some major adjustments. The U.S. is the perennial underdog in soccer. To those of you who say the U.S. will never place in World Cup competition, I say, have a little faith. They've surprised us before and they can do it again.

Andrea Bolt is a junior news-editorial journalism major from the Woodlands.

Foreign arrests under question

MATT BOAZ

The passage of time has provided many concrete examples of the perils of journalism. Within the past year there have been plenty of kidnappings throughout the Middle East and few releases. However, a new issue has burst onto the scene recently: that of the jurisdiction of these countries in arresting journalists and reporters whom they view as protestors or directly threatening to the political system.

The most recent example of this is found in the arrest of Iranian-American journalist, Kian Tajbakhsh, for his protests to the outcome of the recent Iranian election. According to CNN, he underwent trial procedures with other journalists, reformist leaders and former government ministers with the total amounting to nearly 100 people of the 1,000 who had been detained. Iran, in its fit to demonstrate power, has once again proven itself to be an enemy of humanitarian efforts and is further isolating itself from the good esteem of neighboring countries. By negating these trials, perhaps it could finally take a step in the right direction.

But this arrest is not an isolated incident. Though the regime of Ahmadinejad has long been criticized for its anti-Western rhetoric and condemnation of various social groups, others also view journalists as a threat. Myanmar officials recently arrested a rogue US civilian for his attempt to 'rescue' a pro-democracy leader, Daw Aung San Suu Kyi, while she was under house arrest.

Earlier this summer, two Korean-American journalists were sentenced to 12 years hard labor by the government of North Korea for illegal entry into the country. It seems free speech and demonstration are not considered fundamental rights everywhere. Rather, stability and organization focused around a strong leader are the more valued characteristics.

A less aggressive, though perhaps more demonstrative example of this is in China's heavily regulated communication network systems. The country unjustly censors a large amount of media both coming into and leaving the country. Internally, Google searches yield unusual results; a query for 'Tiananmen Square' shows nothing about the military's violent response to pro-democratic protests in 1989. Instead it shows the current gardens and tourist areas of the region. The government fears that rioting and protests may ensue. Additionally, when such reactions do occur, the government tends to 'make an example' of the violators by quelling any of these revolutionary desires that may arise in the common man.

Sadly, this is exactly what is occurring in Iran. Tajbakhsh, arrested along with other intellectuals in the protest of the election, will serve as nothing more than a reference of a potential fearful outcome for those considering similar responses. However, they now finally have the opportunity to improve their relationship with other respectable nations and particularly their perception by the United States. Burma eventually reduced the sentence in its convictions mentioned above, and Korea rescinded the punishment all together. By doing so, they engaged in an active response to the desires of the global community. Another example exists in Karzai's agreement to obey the Afghan constitution and engage in a runoff election because a majority consensus was not achieved the first time and because of allegations of massive ballot fraud.

It seems free speech and demonstration are not considered fundamental rights everywhere.

Both of these exhibit a desire for diplomacy, an engagement of compromise rather than aggression and the intent of gaining control or power. This is exactly the type of action that should be taken in any similar future circumstances. By repealing this arrest of Tajbakhsh, the Iranian government could send a message that it is ready to cooperate within the larger realm of politics and perhaps begin to establish itself as a respectable nation.

Matt Boaz is a senior political science major from Edmond, Okla.

Sikh men sit in prayer at the Gurdwara or Sikh Temple of the Fresno Sikh Society in Fresno, California.

FEATURES

A list of events for November in the DFW area.
Tuesday

Costumes under $10 that will make you holler

By Katie Ruppel
Features Editor

Don't feel like spending $50 on a provocative Disney princess or an overpriced horror costume?
Here is a list of 12 costume ideas for under $10.

- 1. Gangster
White T-shirt: $4.00 at Walmart
Borrow baggy, oversized pants from a friend
Make your own bling from foil

- 2. Saintly Figure
Sheet from home for toga-type dress
Large cross necklace: $1.99 at Halloween USA
Rosary and Bible if you already own them
No shoes necessary!
Give your blessings at parties, maybe offer baptisms

- 3. Ghost
Sheet from home
Cut two holes for eyes
Make SpoOoOoky sounds

- 4. Swine Flu
Pig nose: $3.95 at Magic Etc.
Carry around a box of tissues, perhaps a syringe

- 5. Baby (for boys only)
Hand towel: $2.79 at Target
Safety pins
Fashion the towel in the shape of an old school diaper
The perfect excuse to act immature.

- 6. Bunch o' Grapes
Bag of purple balloons: $2.39 at Walmart
Purple sweatshirt: $7.00 Walmart
Safety pins
Blow up the balloons and pin the uninflated ends all around your sweatshirt. Juicy!

- 7. Bloody Person
Normal clothes you don't care about ruining
Bottle of "blood": $8.95 at Magic Etc. or $6.99 at Halloween USA
Put "blood" all over your clothes and yourself

- 8. Vampire
Black clothes
Vampire kit: $5.99 at Halloween USA, complete with fangs, make-up and sponge, liquid blood capsules and black nails
Memorize lines from Twilight and repeat

- 9. Alter Ego
Normal clothes
Alter ego face piece: $1.49 at Halloween USA
Flesh make-up kit: $3.99 at Halloween USA
Everyone will think your costume is lame until you flip back your hair and AH! You're disgusting!

- 10. Hairy Man
Normal everyday clothes, with a shirt that can be unbuttoned.
Hairy chest piece: $5.99 at Halloween USA
Live out your fantasies of being that fat uncle

- 11. Horned Frog
TCU gear you should already have Set of horns: $4.95 - $7.95 at Magic Etc.
Get it, Horned Frog!

- 12. Dinner Table
Cardboard from an old box
Tablecloth: $2.99 at Walmart
Cut a whole in the cardboard for your head, rest it on your shoulders
Glue tablecloth on cardboard and then glue napkins and utensils on tablecloth
Perfect for holding drinks and late night snacks

Derek Kennedy, the owner of Magic Etc. Fort Worth Costume, said that when trying to make a costume for under $10, you want to head to the accessories. This includes not just mouse ears and make-up, but swords, wings, selected wigs and a wide range of noses, from Goofy to Pinocchio.

If you happen to wait until the very last minute, fear not – it might benefit you! Denise Mayfield, the manager of the Goodwill on Granbury Road, said every Goodwill in Tarrant County is participating in the Midnight Madness Sale, where all items are 50 percent off starting at 8 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 30 and ending at midnight. Whether they have a costume you are looking for or not, Mayfield said they almost always have sheets, t-shirts and oversized clothes that could easily be part of a costume.

Closest Halloween/Thrift stores to TCU:

Magic Etc. Fort Worth Costume
2300 West Fwy
Fort Worth, TX 76102
(817) 926-2442

Halloween USA
8600 East Fwy
Fort Worth, TX 76120
(817) 275-3845

McCart Thrift Center
5203 McCart Ave
Fort Worth, TX 76115
(817) 921-9971

Goodwill
6297 Granbury Road
Fort Worth, TX 76133
(817) 292-0740

Photo Illustration by MADISON DONAHUE

KATIE RUPPEL/Features Editor

Record-holding horror house gives real hauntings

By Mary Sue Greenleaf
Staff Reporter

Outside of downtown Fort Worth lies a 100-year-old meat packing plant with a suspicious past.

Doors slam with no explanation. People hear things in certain parts of the building when no one is there.

A ghost has even been sighted in the clown room, dubbed the most haunted part of the warehouse by owner Todd James.

James, who purchased the building 5 years ago, said that it has conjured up haunts since he acquired it.

"When we found that old building ... it had some things in it that were a little suspect. It looked like it had been up to no good for awhile," James said.

The building, already haunted by its past, transformed into an entirely new home of terror when James and his group turned it into Cutting Edge Haunted House.

Freshman pre-major Mason Thompson visited the house with a group of friends last Friday.

Upon entering the house, an eerie video instructs you to proceed through a haunted maze in the dark and find a door, Thompson said.

The group frantically searched for the non-existent door, and exited through a fire escape into the next haunting scene.

Thompson described that portion of the house as completely dark with water misting from the ceilings. Soaked and afraid, she continued her long trek through the haunted tour.

From ceiling to floor, the final room in the warehouse was packed with soapy bubbles, which Thompson described as a washing machine explosion.

"You are walking through and it's getting all over you ... and then you are outside, covered in bubbles. So that's how it ended," Thompson said.

Thompson said that the actors were acrobatic and would wildly jump around behind bars before popping out at passers by.

"They had no sense of personal boundaries," Thompson said.

James said that the actors go through a three-week audition process for their parts. They also attend courses that teach them the tactics and philosophy used at Cutting Edge Haunted House.

Thompson described it as the scariest haunted house she had ever visited, due to the intensity and length.

"It was so long, so it never let up. You were just constantly being jumped at," Thompson said.

According to the Guinness World Records Web site, the house takes about 55 minutes to complete.

The Guinness Book of World Records dubbed The Cutting Edge Haunted House the longest walk-through horror house in the world.

Haunted House goers wind through over 2,261 feet of the warehouse from entrance to exit, according to the Web site.

James said that the attraction received a lot of national recognition this year as one of the top haunts in the country.

Fangoria, an American horror magazine, ranked Cutting Edge Haunted House No. 7 of their Top 20 Hometown Haunts.

"In the horror industry, it's kind of the Rolling Stone," James said. "Anybody that makes any sort of horror flick on any level really wants to be reviewed in that magazine."

The group who started the haunted house celebrated their 20th anniversary together this year. They have spent the past 19 years in Fort Worth.

James said most of the staff decided to start the project after graduating together from the University of Texas-Arlington.

He said they all loved Halloween and talked about opening a haunted house when they were younger. After graduation, the group decided to make their nightmares reality and opened their first attraction in Austin.

James said that most of the staff has been together since the opening.

"We're a giant family and we get to play practical jokes on people. I just don't see how it gets much better than that," James said.

The Skiff will be looking into the phenomenon that is PostSecret in a couple of weeks.

Send your PostSecrets, anonymous confessions of funny/embarrassing/naughty things you've done, to us at:

Features Editor
TCU Box 298050
Fort Worth, TX
76129

Leave return address blank. Your confidentiality is promised. And please, keep it PG-13.

CHRIS CARLSON / AP Photo
An honor guard stands at attention as the remains of Air Force Sgt. Robert Stinson are unloaded by ground personnel at Ontario International Airport on a flight from Hawaii in Ontario, Calif. on Wednesday. The remains of the World War II airman missing for 65 years are being returned to the family for services Friday.

Pilot's remains returned home

By Gillian Flaccus
Associated Press Writer

HIGHLAND, Calif. (AP) — For two decades after her son's bomber went down in the Pacific Ocean during World War II, Vella Stinson faithfully wrote the U.S. government twice a month to ask if his body had been found — or if anyone was looking.

The mother of six strapping boys went to her grave without the answer that has finally reached her two surviving sons: the remains of Sgt. Robert Stinson are coming home.

Military divers recovered two pieces of leg bone from the wreckage of a B-24J Liberator bomber found at the bottom of the ocean off the coast of the island nation of Palau. DNA testing showed the femur fragments belonged to the 24-year-old flight engineer who died in combat on Sept. 1, 1944.

Stinson's remains arrived under U.S. Air Force escort Wednesday and will be buried Friday at Riverside National Cemetery with full military honors. In between, the body will be kept at a mortuary less than 100 yards from the home where Stinson grew up with his brothers.

"He's not someplace on a little island or at the bottom of the ocean. He's home," said Edward Stinson, who was 9 when his brother died.

For Robert Stinson, the journey home was far from a sure thing.

Stinson's family knew only that his bomber had gone down in the Pacific Ocean. The government politely responded to his mother's letters but said again and again that no new information had surfaced.

The family learned that Stinson, who joined the Air Force right out of high school, won several medals in the summer of 1944 for participating in dangerous attacks on Japanese airdomes, military installations and enemy ships.

In 1994, a nonprofit group of adventurers and scuba divers began to search for the missing bomber off the waters of Koror, Palau's biggest island. The 15-member group, called BentProp, travels to the island nation each year for a month to search for some 200 missing U.S. World War II aircraft.

Half of the wrecks scattered in the waters around the archipelago's 300 tiny islands have missing crew members associated with them, said Daniel O'Brien, a member of the BentProp team. Stinson's plane, dubbed "Babes in Arms," had 11 crew members — and there were eyewitness reports of where it went down. Eight crew members went down with the plane; three parachuted out, but were captured by the Japanese.

The group attended reunions of Stinson's bomber squad and the aging veterans told them

"We knew that three of them had gotten out of the plane and ... you always hope that the three that got out, that one of them would be him and that maybe he survived."

Richard Stinson
surviving brother of Robert Stinson

where they thought they had seen the plane go down as the rest of the formation raced back to base at 200 mph. BentProp members methodically searched that area for six years, but found nothing.

Then, in 2000, several members of the group doing more research stumbled upon obscure black-and-white aerial photos in the National Archives that were taken by a crew member aboard another bomber just moments after Stinson's plane went down. The team thought it odd the photographer had taken shots when no bombs were falling, and then realized the pictures were probably an attempt to document where the bomber crashed.

The pictures indicated a splash zone eight miles from where BentProp had been looking.

An elderly fisherman bolstered that evidence: he had seen plane wreckage in that area while spear-fishing about 15 years before.

The team dove the site in 2004 and instantly hit a jackpot: a B-24 propeller at 30 feet and then the plane, broken in three parts around a coral head where it had sat for more than 60 years. Debris was scattered at up to 70 feet deep.

The divers quickly turned over their findings to the Joint Prisoners of War, Missing in Action Accounting Command, or JPAC, the government agency that searches for U.S. prisoners of war and missing soldiers.

Military divers soon confirmed the plane's identity and recovered hundreds of items from the ocean floor, including dozens of tiny bone fragments, a rusted metal eyeglass frame, a tangled parachute cord attached to singed parachute, a shoe sole, coins, dog tags and a shoelace.

In 2006, Edward Stinson and Richard Stinson, the other surviving brother, gave DNA samples. On Feb. 1, Richard Stinson got the call: their brother, the 6-foot-4 clown with curly hair and a love of sports and poker, was finally coming home.

Four other missing crew members were also identified. Three could not be identified, but the remaining bones will be buried together at Arlington National Cemetery next spring.

"There's finally an ending to it. We never expected something like this," said Richard Stinson, now 87. "We knew that three of them had gotten out of the plane and ... you always hope that the three that got out, that one of them would be him and that maybe he survived."

With Stinson's remains coming home, his brothers are overwhelmed with the memories they have stored away all these decades — memories that, until now, are all they had.

"He hasn't been lonely the last two, three weeks. He has risen," said Edward Stinson. "Welcome home, brother."

NASA tests prototype moon rocket in Florida

By Marcia Dunn
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Florida (AP) — NASA's newest rocket successfully completed a brief test flight Wednesday, the first step in a back-to-the-moon program that could yet be shelved by the White House.

The 327-foot (100-meter) Ares I-X rocket resembled a giant white pencil as it shot into the sky, delayed a day by poor weather.

Nearly twice the height of the spaceship it's supposed to replace — the shuttle — the skinny experimental rocket carried no passengers or payload, only throwaway ballast and hundreds of sensors. The flight cost $445 million.

NASA said the flight was a tremendous success, based on early indications.

"Oh, man. Well, how impressive is that," said Jeff Hanley, manager of NASA's space frontier program, known as Constellation. "You've accomplished a great step forward for exploration," he told launch controllers.

It was the first time in nearly 30 years that a new rocket took off from Kennedy Space Center. Columbia made the maiden voyage for the shuttle fleet back in 1981.

Lift-off, in fact, occurred 48 years and one day after the first launch of a Saturn rocket, a precursor to what carried astronauts to the moon during the Apollo program. The Saturn V moon rockets were the tallest ever built, an impressive 363 feet (111 meters).

Wednesday's launch, three

"You've accomplished a great step forward for exploration."

Jeff Hanley
manager of NASA's space frontier program

years in the making, represented the first step in NASA's effort to return astronauts to the moon. The White House, though, is re-evaluating the human spaceflight program and may dump the Ares I in favor of another type of rocket and possibly another destination.

The test flight attracted a large crowd.

The prototype moon rocket took off through a few clouds from a former shuttle launch pad at 11:30 a.m., three and a half hours late because of bad weather. Launch controllers had to retest the rocket systems after more than 150 lightning strikes were reported around the pad overnight. Then they had to wait out interfering rain clouds, the same kind that thwarted Tuesday's try.

The ballistic flight did not come close to reaching space and, as expected, lasted a mere two minutes. That's how long it took for the first-stage solid-fuel booster to burn out and separate from the mock upper stage 25 miles (40 kilometers) up. But it will take months to analyze all the data from the approximately 725 pressure, strain and acceleration sensors.

Parachutes popped open and dropped the booster into the Atlantic, where recovery ships waited.

The upper portion of the rocket — all fake parts — were hurtled to an estimated altitude of 28 miles (45 kilometers) and then fell uncontrolled into the ocean. Those pieces were never meant to be retrieved.

It was all over in six minutes.

"Think about what we just did. Our first flight test and the only thing we're waiting on was weather," launch director Ed Mango told his team.

NASA contends the Ares I will be ready to carry astronauts to the International Space Station in 2015, four to five years after the shuttles are retired. But a panel of experts said in a report to President Barack Obama last week that it will be more like 2017, and stressed that the entire effort is underfunded.

The first Ares moon trip would be years beyond that under the current plan.

No matter what direction the Obama Administration takes, NASA managers expect to learn a lot from Wednesday's experimental flight, even if it's for another type of rocket. They said they already have learned a lot.

Hanley, for one, does not want to hear anymore about the cloudy, electrically charged conditions — tribo-electricity — that made it so difficult to get this test rocket off the ground. Future rockets will have proper protection.

"Whatever we end up flying, this will not be a problem," he promised.

SNAPSHOTS OF YOUR FUTURE

Spring 2010 Skiff Applications

ACCEPTING APPLICATIONS FOR ADVERTISING MANAGER AND EDITOR IN CHIEF

OCT. 27 - NOV. 6

Job applications are available @ www.dailyskiff.com/jobs

Applications should include

- A ONE-PAGE PERSONAL STATEMENT REGARDING YOUR INTEREST IN THE POSITION
- A ONE-PAGE RESUME

Position: AD Manager

Hire and Coordinate sales team and designers • Meet daily deadlines • Paper layout • Work with national clients

Position: Editor in Chief

Hire and coordinate editorial staff • Oversee daily content • Edit and plan daily issues

EMAIL APPLICATION PACKAGES TO STUDENT PUBLICATIONS DIRECTOR
ROBERT BOHLER (r.bohler@tcu.edu)

Best New
Restaurant 2008
-Fort Worth Weekly

Voted Best Margaritas
& Frozen Srewhdrivers in Fort Worth

Yuca Lounge Thursday nights
Acoustic Music Friday nights

Happy Hour 2-6 pm every day

Thursday Specials

$4 Rocks Margaritas after 9pm

909 West Magnolia • Fort Worth, Texas 76104

Phone 817.924.8646 • Fax 817.924.8648 • yucantacostand1@yahoo.com

TCU does not encourage the consumption of alcohol. If you do consume alcohol, you should do so responsibly, and you should never drive after drinking.

1 IN 4
 TCU STUDENTS WOULD CHOOSE NOT TO HAVE ALCOHOL
 AVAILABLE AT PARTIES

FOR FREEDOM 2 CHOOSE RESPONSIBLY

Based on a campus wide survey conducted in 2008.

ETC.

Today in History
On this day in 1998, nearly four decades after he became the first American to orbit the Earth, Senator John Hershel Glenn, Jr., is launched into space again aboard the space shuttle Discovery.

— History Channel

Joke of the Day
Q: What do you call a sheep with no legs?
A: A cloud.

SUDOKU PUZZLE

Sponsored by:

#6 TCU Football vs. UNLV
Saturday @ 3 PM
STUDENTS FREE!

1		4	8	9				6
7	3							4
					1	2	9	5
		7	1	2		6
5		7		3				8
		6		9	5	7
9	1	4	6
	2						3	7
8		5	1	2				4

Directions

Fill in the grid so that every 3x3 box, row and column contains the digits 1 through 9 without repeating numbers.

See Friday's paper for sudoku and crossword solutions.

Wednesday's Solution

5	2	7	9	3	8	4	6	1
6	3	1	2	5	4	7	9	8
9	8	4	1	6	7	3	5	2
1	4	3	8	2	9	6	7	5
8	7	9	5	4	6	2	1	3
2	6	5	7	1	3	8	4	9
3	1	2	6	7	5	9	8	4
7	5	8	4	9	2	1	3	6
4	9	6	3	8	1	5	2	7

GET TIPS AND MORE SOLUTIONS AT WWW.SUDOKU.COM

Bliss

by Harry Bliss

"If rock beats scissors and scissors beats paper, why, then, can't rock beat paper?"

"Sorry, girl — it seems they consider your being a dog a pre-existing condition."

MORTY PICKS A FATAL TIME TO CUT IN LINE.

TODAY'S CROSSWORD

Sponsored by:

On Campus Workshop
Job Search Strategies
in a tough job market

Maximizing your social media, the art of self-promotion and meeting the right people.
FREE dinner

Nov. 4, 5-6:30 p.m.
Kelly Alumni Center

Register at www.careers.tcu.edu

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13
14				15					16
17			18						19
20						21		22		23
24			24		25			26		27
28	29	30					31	32			33	34
35						36	37
39						40			41			42
43						44				46
47						48			49	50
53	54					55		56	57		58	59	60	61
62						63				65
66									67					68
69														71

By Don Gagliardo

10/29/09

ACROSS

- 1 Dawn goddess
- 4 Starbucks flavor
- 9 Bring about
- 14 "nuff!"
- 15 Saint associated with the Russian alphabet
- 16 Weed B Gon maker
- 17 Kitchen backups
- 19 Took to jail
- 20 Alley Cop's girl
- 21 Displayed
- 23 Minnesota twins?
- 24 Snootiness
- 26 Great server
- 28 Island big shot
- 31 North Carolina team
- 35 Grassy tracts
- 36 Illustrator Silverstein
- 38 Rub the wrong way
- 39 For what worth
- 40 Container for the end of 17-, 31-, 47 or 64-Across; there's a literal one in each four-square puzzle corner
- 42 Veep before Al
- 43 Put into law
- 45 Bridge expert Sharif
- 46 Clears after taxes
- 47 Octane rating sites
- 49 Widely separated
- 51 Opposite of away
- 52 Part of a yard
- 53 Prefix with meter
- 55 Astronomer Tycho
- 58 Western border lake
- 62 Demolish
- 64 Bonnaville
- 65 Speechway feature
- 66 Chicago hub
- 67 Tours ta-ta
- 68 ALers who don't play the field
- 69 Adlai's running mate
- 70 Computer image dot
- 71 Manager Torre

DOWN

- 1 Gas sign north of the border
- 2 Columbus's home
- 3 Prefix with gram
- 4 Obama's opponent
- 5 Skinny Olive
- 6 Interbreed
- 7 Word with five or noon
- 8 Too
- 9 General Mills cereal
- 10 Heavenly altar
- 11 Eclectic bimonthly digest
- 12 ___ guard; bit of catchers' gear
- 13 Tons of time
- 18 Actor Kinski
- 22 "This means ___!"
- 25 Ich source
- 27 Musket end?
- 28 ___ light; filmmaking arc lamp
- 29 WellPoint rival
- 30 Is in the running for
- 31 Abounds
- 32 Jessica of "Dark Angel"

Wednesday's Puzzle Solved

F	L	O	W	A	M	M	O	A	T	E	A	M
A	O	N	E	V	L	A	D	D	E	L	T	A
D	O	U	B	L	E	I	N	D	E	M	N	I	T	Y
E	M	S	E	N	V	I	R	I	T	Z	Y
E	E	G	A	I	R	S
S	Q	U	A	R	E	D	A	N	C	E	S	A	D
T	U	L	S	A	A	L	D	A	C	L	S	A	D
J	A	N	E	T	L	I	E	C	L	U	M	P
O	R	A	L	P	L	E	A	A	A	U	D	I	T
E	K	E	G	R	A	N	N	Y	S	M	I	T	H
Z	O	O	S	V	I	P
I	D	A	H	O	X	E	N	E	S	P
S	L	I	P	O	F	T	H	E	T	O	N	G	U	E
T	E	N	P	M	D	O	N	T	I	A	M	S
U	R	S	A	E	S	H	O	E	K	N	O	T

(c)2009 Tribune Media Services, Inc.

10/29/09

- 33 Exams for future litigators, briefly
- 34 Taste or touch
- 37 Hula ___
- 40 Trips ___
- 41 Thereabouts
- 44 USN noncom
- 46 Birth-related
- 48 Sea, to Sartre
- 50 Amount of soup on the stove
- 52 Cartoon cat
- 53 Oklahoma tribe
- 54 Outbursts from Homer
- 56 "Stat" cousin
- 57 ___ only known!
- 59 Meccan pilgrimage
- 60 First century Roman emperor
- 61 Latin being
- 63 ___ you serious?
- 65 Top with a slogan

For PRINT or ONLINE

log on to tcudailyskiff.com

advertising

or call Skiff Advertising
817.257.7426

"Before giving, I always look for the Humane Seal."

Noah Wyle
NOAH WYLE
Star of NBC's hit show ER

The Humane Charity Seal of Approval guarantees that a health charity funds vital patient services or life-saving medical research, but never animal experiments.

Council on Humane Giving
Washington, D.C.
www.HumaneSeal.org
202-686-2210, ext. 335
PHYSICIANS COMMITTEE FOR RESPONSIBLE MEDICINE

Mondays
$3.25 pitchers

Charlie's Cellar
2916 W. Berry St.
Fort Worth, Texas

Tue + Thu
Karaoke

Now two bars open
Thu - Sat

Wednesday
$2.50 you-call-its

The average college student appears in hundreds of photos.

Here's your chance to look nice for one of them.

For more than a century, TCU students have been photographed for the yearbook. It's quick, easy, and free. Get a yearbook photo made while you're still young and looking good. Unlike some of your social media photos, it can't hurt.

Yearbook photos. A tradition for keeps.
www.yearbook.tcu.edu TCU

Get photographed 10 am to 7 pm daily in the library and at the BLUU, Market Square. The '09 Yearbooks are here! Pick them up in the BLUU outside Market Square.

TCU DAILY SKIFF 35¢ PER WORD PER DAY
45¢ PER BOLD WORD PER DAY
www.tcudailyskiff.com/classifieds TO PLACE YOUR AD

CLASSIFIEDS

HELP WANTED	FOR RENT
SURVEY TAKERS NEEDED: Make $5-25 per survey. www. GetPaidToThink.com	WON'T LAST 1BR/1BA Avail. NOW! Regularly $1199, NOW $847, Attached garage 903.348.9518
INTERNSHIP / PART TIME OPP Print and Promotional Supply Chain Agency seeks intern / employee to help with order, order execution, packing orders, and other duties, primarily with e-commerce sites. Must be able to travel to Grapevine frequently, work load and wage will be determined by capability and desire. Send resume to matt.carnes@proforma.com . No calls	TCU RENT PROPERTIES 3 bedrooms, $1,200, details/ pics at www.tierra-group.com 817.763.0997
	Skiff Advertising 817-257-7426 dailyskiff.com

SPORTS

Check dailyskiff.com for video of this week's NCAA 10 simulation.

SIMULATION

VEGAS NIGHT

Courtesy of ELECTRONIC ARTS

Wide receiver Bart Johnson shows his frustration after dropping a pass on a last effort drive at the end of the game. TCU was dethroned from its win streak high by the UNLV Rebels in the Skiff's weekly NCAA 10 simulation, 23-21. Quarterback Andy Dalton threw two interceptions and gave away one fumble which lead to three Rebel field goals. For video highlights of the game check dailyskiff.com.

VOLLEYBALL

Team heads west to face Aztec squad

By Seth Dahle
Staff Writer

TCU volleyball will look to push its winning streak to five matches Thursday night against the San Diego State Aztecs in San Diego, California.

The Horned Frogs completed the sweep over Wyoming Oct. 24 as they topped the Cowgirls 3-0 (25-20, 25-13, 25-15). Senior Kourtney Edwards led the team with 11 kills, and senior Katelyn Blackwood held up the defensive end with 13 digs.

TCU held Wyoming to 26 kills and a .143 hitting percentage. Senior Lauren Otto and sophomore Kristen Hester combined for 17 of the 41 Horned Frog kills.

A tight first set saw seven ties and three lead changes, as Wyoming hurried to an 8-6 lead. A Cowgirl miscue, a kill by junior Irene Hester, and a service ace by Megan Munce, the reigning Mountain West Conference Player of the Week, started a 7-2 run that put TCU up three, 13-10.

A Cowgirl service error brought the Horned Frogs to set point, 24-18, and a Katelyn Blackwood kill won TCU set one.

After three quick ties in the second set, TCU burst out to an advantage. With the score tied at 8, the Horned Frogs turned up the offense with a 14-2 run to go up 22-10. Kills by Irene Hester and Otto handed TCU the second set.

TCU used another big run to win the third set. Trailing 8-5, the Horned Frogs stormed to a 21-13 advantage thanks to a 16-5 push. Edwards' kill put the team up 23-14, and two Wyoming errors won TCU the match.

San Diego State is on a four-match winning streak of its own.

The Aztecs are on the heels of a 3-1 (25-17, 22-25, 25-21, 26-24) win over Cal State Bakersfield Oct. 24. Junior Hannah Evans had a double-double with 13 kills and 11 digs.

Junior Lauren Salisbury is the offensive leader with 2.65 kills per set. Freshman Kristi Jackels leads the defensive end and racks in 4.10 digs per set.

TCU is 5-6 all-time against the SDSU, with the last victory coming on Oct. 3 in Fort Worth. The Horned Frogs won a hard fought 3-1 (25-20, 25-11, 20-25, 26-24) battle and were led by Irene Hester (10 kills, 14 digs) and Edwards (16 kills).

In the Mountain West standings, TCU (19-5) currently stands in second place with an 8-2 record. Meanwhile, the Aztecs (10-10) are 4-5 in league play and in sixth place.

TCU vs SDSU

When: 9 p.m. Thursday
Where: San Diego, Calif.

T-BALL

Fans need to accept serious role in BCS bid

TRAVIS L. BROWN

The Frogs are ranked No. 6 in the nation and are in the driver's seat of their own destiny. This Saturday, they have the chance to move another step closer to their greatest season in over 70 years. The Frogs are playing Top 10 football, which is more than Texas Tech, Texas A&M and even Oklahoma can say this season. Not to mention this weekend is Homecoming, a time to celebrate the tradition of this school. Why wouldn't every Frog fan be at Saturday's game?

It's a question many fans have tried to answer for years now. How can TCU have such a dominant program yet draw such a mediocre crowd?

Head coach Gary Patterson addressed the issue several times this year. He credited the team's slow start against Colorado State to lack of energy not only within the players but from the stands. The Frogs have played some of their best football on the road, especially in venues such as Clemson's Death Valley and BYU's LaVell Edwards Stadium, where they can draw off of the energy of the crowd, even if it is negative energy toward the Frogs.

Now more than ever, it is up to all Frog fans, alumni, students and community fans alike, to bring the Frogs through the home stretch into a BCS bowl. Patterson even issued a call to action this week at his press conference.

"It's not all on the shoulders of the team. (Fans) need to get themselves out (and) it needs to be a loud crowd," Patterson said. "We don't need to be loud as soon as something good happens. We need to be loud as soon as we walk in the stadium."

The Frogs have fulfilled their end of the bargain so far, reaching the seven game mark unscathed and putting a nationally-spotlighted beating on BYU so bad it will be hard to forget for many years to come. Now, Frog fans must do their part.

From here on out, BCS representatives will be at TCU football games not only gauging the play on the field, but the loyalty in the stands. The Frogs can play their heart out and run the table, but if a representative thinks Boise State fans can pull in more money, they could get the nod over the Frogs. It might not be the most fair selection process, but money can talk louder than any poll or game score.

It is evident Patterson thinks the intensity of the crowd, or lack thereof, really affects the play on the field. TCU has a coach for which fans should be proud. He understands the role fans play during a game and throughout the course of a season. Frog fans should give him and his team their due respect by showing up to see the fruits of their labor, which this year could be oranges.

So for the rest of this year, gather up your tailgate just a few minutes early to make it into the stadium by kickoff and scream your lungs out, you Frog faithful. Those few minutes lost each week will be made up in one more glorious tailgating opportunity after Jan. 1.

Sports editor Travis L. Brown is a senior news-editorial journalism major from Dallas.

FOOTBALL

Patterson: Strong UNLV team could present a challenge

By Mary Sue Greenleaf
Staff Reporter

After a physical battle in Provo, Utah the Horned Frogs return to defend their home in the Halloween Homecoming game.

The Frogs face off Saturday against the UNLV Rebels for their fourth conference game as the No. 1 team in the Mountain West Conference.

Head Coach Gary Patterson said that the Rebels are a strong team and could present a challenge for the Frogs on Saturday.

"They played a good game against New Mexico and played Utah tough at home," Patterson said. "They have played in big games before. They beat Arizona State last year and came close with Oregon State."

The Rebels have a 3-5 record, with one conference win coming against New Mexico last Saturday.

Last year's contest against UNLV ended with a 44-14 TCU victory.

Dating back to the 1996 campaign, TCU holds a 6-1 lead over UNLV.

The Frogs are also the third-highest ranked opponent the Rebels have ever faced at No. 6 in the BCS standings.

The Frogs are 3-0 against the Rebels in Fort Worth, and 3-1 in Las Vegas.

The most recent Horned Frog loss to UNLV came in 1997 with a 19-21 defeat in Las Vegas.

In his weekly press conference Tuesday, Patterson urged caution when discussing Saturday's game.

"UNLV is very talented on offense, especially at the skill positions, and they are getting healthier on defense," Patterson said.

Senior UNLV wide receiver Ryan Wolfe currently leads all active NCAA players in both receptions and receiving yards with 250 for 3,392 yards during his college career.

Wolfe is an All-American candidate for 2009 with 657 receiving yards and 2 touchdowns so far.

Junior running back Channing Trotter leads the Rebels in rushing yards this season with 422 on 93 carries.

In passing yards, the Rebels are led by junior quarterback Omar Clayton. Clayton has thrown for 1,663 yards and 10 touchdowns so far in 2009.

Patterson said there is no easy contest for the Frogs this season, and that the team must be prepared each week.

"You can't decide not to play well in a ball game, because those guys on the other side have good coaches and good players too," Patterson said. "We have to be ready to play."

Kickoff is scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday in Amon Carter Stadium.

Versus HD will air the game. This marks UNLV's first appearance on the channel since 2007.

Failed, failed, failed.
And then...

PERSISTENCE
Pass It On.

THE FOUNDATION FOR A BETTER LIFE
www.forbetterlife.org

BUY RECYCLED.

AND SAVE.

When you buy products made from recycled materials, recycling keeps working. To find out more, call 1-800-2-RECYCLE or visit www.environmentaldefense.org

Ad Council

ENVIRONMENTAL DEFENSE
finding the ways that work